Similarity Detection

Ketika karya tulis student dikirimkan, teks mereka dibandingkan dengan konten dari tiga database berikut:

1. Student papers (1,8 miliar)
2. Web content (99 miliar)
3. Journals and publications (89 juta)

Kemudian akan menghasilkan laporan yang menampilkan semua teks yang cocok, sehingga Anda dapat menentukan apakah plagiarisme telah terjadi atau tidak.

Pendeteksi kemiripan memudahkan Anda mengidentifikasi karya orisinal.

Apa perbedaan antara kemiripan teks dan plagiarisme?

Kemiripan Teks: Ketika ide atau kata-kata orang lain hadir dalam karya seseorang

Plagiarisme: Ketika ide atau kata-kata orang lain hadir dalam karya seseorang tanpa pengakuan , kredit atau atribusi yang tepat

Apples are a fruit grown around the world that come in a number of varieties, colours and flavours. The most common colour for an apple is red, but they are also available in green, and yellow to a lesser extent.	Copy/ paste

Apples are grown above the ground, on trees, collectively known as an apple orchard. In Australia, they are grown mostly in Australian states, however, they are grown in some areas of NSW and Queensland. When growing, they naturally develop a wax on their surface, which is removed when washed. They are often then artificially coated in another food grade wax to preserve them as the natural wax would.

Apples are available in Australia year round, due to the ability to store them in special conditions. The reduced temperature, high humidity and low oxygen of these environments prevents the ripening of the fruit and therefore provides a longer shelf life. Some environments are even able to reduce the gas the fruits produce, extending life even further.

The process of storing and extending the life of apples is not a new process. Apple growers and merchants have been extending the life of apples using various methods of storage for thousands of years. In fact, limestone caves were used in France in Roman times and, with their higher levels of carbon dioxide, they can probably be considered some of the first known examples of controlled atmosphere storage.

Apples are one of the most nutritious fruits available in Australia. They are one of the highest antioxidant fruits in Australia, and an excellent source of dietary fibre. They contain a number of other vitamins and minerals. They are also naturally sweet, so a good choice for children in lieu of manufactured sugary sweet.

Essay topic: Apples are a fruit that are commonly eaten in Australia, for a variety of reasons. In your essay, describe their health benefits and why they are so popular in Australia. — Pertayaan Esai

Apples are a fruit native to Central Asia, however, are grown worldwide and are one of the top three fruits produced worldwide (Harvard School of Public Health, 2019). Apples grow in a number of different varieties, the most popular being the Pink Lady and Apple Smith. A fleshy fruit, they can be eaten raw or often used in recipes, to make meals such as pies. — Sitasi

Apples are a good source of nutrition, containing high amounts of Vitamin A, Vitamin C and Fibre. They also have high concentrations of polyphenols, which act as antioxidants in the body. Nutrients are found in both the skin and the flesh. Apples have also been shown to assist in weight loss. In research from Cho et al. (2013, p. 826) it was found that "supplementing apple products such as [Apple Pomace] and [Apple Juice Concentrate] may help suppress body weight and WAT gain, as well as improve lipid profiles in diet-induced obese rats." — Fakta Umum / Kutipan langsung

Apples are a popular choice of fruit as they are available all year round, despite the seasonality of their growing. To keep Apples fresh and available year-round, they are stored shortly after they are picked in modified atmospheric environments, which are very cold, low oxygen, high humidity environments. Subject to much controversy, this practice is not new - similar practices had been undertaken historically in Europe, by storing apples in cellars over winter. These practices prevent the over ripening and rotting of the fruit (Apple & Pear Australia Ltd., 2016). — Tidak bisa diparafrase, disertai sitasi
